'Safe Car Wash App' British drivers are being urged by churches across the country to look closely when they take their car to be hand washed and to use a new, free mobile-phone app if they fear workers are being treated like slaves. The campaign 'Safe Car Wash App' was launched by the Church of England and the Catholic Church in England and Wales amid growing concerns that some of the estimated 18,000 hand car washes operating around the country are exploiting workers. Thousands of workers in car washes are believed to be slaves - mostly men lured from Eastern Europe, then trapped in debt bondage, forced to work in unsafe conditions, stripped of documents and subjected to threats, abuse and violence. The app lets drivers punch in their location when arriving at a car wash then flick through a series of slavery indicators such as whether the car wash only accepts cash, evidence of workers living on site or whether the workers seem fearful. If the answers indicate a high likelihood of slavery, users will be directed to a modern slavery helpline. At least 13,000 people in Britain are estimated by the government to be victims of modern slavery - but police say the true figure is far more likely to be in the tens of thousands. While forced labour is rife among Britain's building sites, nail bars, factories and farms, car wash slavery has grown over the past decade with unregulated businesses sprouting up nationwide, anti-slavery authorities said last year. Questions to ask yourself when at a car wash are: Do the workers have access to suitable protective clothing? Look out for gloves and boots. Is there evidence of workers living on site? Can you see a caravan or mattresses and bedding? Does anyone appear controlling or intimidating? Does the body language of the workers appear withdrawn or fearful? Do there appear to be minors working at the car wash? Did you pay less than £6.70 for the car wash? Does the car wash only accept cash? Did they offer a receipt? Did you have to pay the manager? Car washes accounted for the most forced labor cases referred to Britain's modern slavery helpline last year - making up a quarter of about 700 cases - according to charity Unseen. A parliamentary probe was set up in April to investigate modern slavery in Britain's hand car washes. 'The value of this app is that in addition to immeasurably improving the lives of victims of modern slavery being cruelly exploited in car washes today, it also empowers a community to act,' Britain's Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner Kevin Hyland said. The App is also endorsed by the National Police Chiefs' Council, the Local Government Association and the Independent Anti-Slavery Commissioner. Data from the app will be analyzed over a six-month period and collated in a report to be published next year.
